Taylor has Goals

The Taylor community's goal is to establish a long-term, mutually beneficial relationship. Our community leaders carefully evaluate every project for its merits, and they look for the potential of success based on the company's leadership, financial health and ability to make sound strategic decisions that will enable the company to be successful for many years. Such due diligence is taken because we seek to make our community better, not just bigger. Our community values sustainability and responsible prosperity.

For many years, our economy has been largely based in agriculture and manufacturing. The hard working spirit of these industries stay with us today. We actively recruit companies that add to the diversity of our local industry while providing our residents with good employment.

- Advanced manufacturing including computer equipment and electronics which can take advantage of our close proximity to regional powerhouses like Dell, AMD, and Samsung.
- Materials manufacturing to support the region's surging construction market
- Communications equipment manufacturing, in-bound call centers, and remote data centers who find that our affordable real estate and labor make it possible for them to save money while still being located in a large metropolitan area.

Taylor also seeks to increase businesses associated with value-added agriculture; logistics and distribution; hospitality and tourism; design (e.g. arts and crafts, software, film production, professional services); healthcare; and retail.
